I worked with Frieda Klotz between April and June 2012, when we collaborated to write an 80-page documentary film script and 30-page grant application for the National Endowment to the Humanities.

Frieda is a gifted writer. It was soon apparent that she was a quick study, acquainting herself with the complicated history and politics of our topic and swiftly mastering its nuances. Frieda has an exceptionally clear writing style, and an ability to convey complex ideas in an engaging and creative way. Her immeasurable contribution to the script and to the grant application exceeded my best expectations.

Furthermore, Frieda supervised interns for our projects, with great success. In addition to a natural talent for pacing and visual storytelling, she possesses the more practical organizational skills required to order and plan documents and projects on a large scale.

Frieda brings to any project an efficacious, problem-solving approach. In terms of personal qualities, I would describe her as someone who is insightful and ambitious as well as responsible, cooperative, and a pleasure to work with. Frieda's personable and open character makes her a positive addition to any work environment. As a writer and a thinker – and as a colleague or an employee – I recommend her most highly.
